Kohl Party Wins Control In Hesse Vote

By James M. Markham New York Times Service . BONN - The West German Social Democratic Party on Sunday lost control of Hesse state for the first time since World War II to a center-right coalition. The two conservative parties Chancellor Helmit Kohl's Christian Democrats and the Free Democrats, won 56 of 110 seats in the industrial state's parliement in the first test of public opinion since January's parliamentary elections. The unexpected victory was a boost to Mr. Kohl's party, which had done poorly in the padiamentary.

In Moscow, Beijing, Budapest and other capitals where Communist parties rule, national leaderships are locked in an expanding, high-stakes debate over the need to modernize their stagnating economies and anresponsive political systems.

Those debates have been caused by starthingly candid admissions by Communist leaders themselves about the failure of "scientific socialism" to generate enough growth late in the 20th century to provide the efficient cradle-to-grave welfare systems envisigned a century ago by Marx and used later adds Professor Paul Hirst, a leading British by Lenin to justify the Soviet dictatorship socialist and emic. This series will attempt to examine the origin, nature and interaction of the modernization and adaptation - frequently labeled "reforms" - that are occurring in Eastern Europe, China, the Soviet Union and Southeast Asia and to raise some of the implicaoons these changes hold for the West.

This challenge of historic assumptions is under way not only in the Soviet bloc and in China, hut also among leftist political parties in the West that have accepted the Marxist analysis of society and committed them-selves to state ownership and direct management of the distribution of resources and

In France, the Communist Party is literaldying, as its aging membership and elecorate are not renewed. It has dropped in a decade from representing 20 percent of the electorate to 10 percent or less today.

In Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is asking for a third term so she can "eradicate" socialism, which, she says, "is alien to our British character."

Ideological modernization has thus become an urgent task for Communist-ruled countries and for leftist political forces in the West at about the same time and for many of Public opinion polls in Western Europe monstrate a clear connection between the established failures of the Soviet economic and political model and the rejection of Marxism by European electorates.

The wave of change has already created significant political ferment and has stirred resistance, raising questions about how farreaching such efforts to redefine basic premises of Communist rule can be before the system itself feels endangered and strikes

Paris and Moscow Expel 6 Each Over Spy Affair

By Julian Nundy ernational Herald Tribune

PARIS - France said Sunday that it had expelled six Soviet diplomats - not three as earlier announced - after breaking up a spy ring seeking intelligence on Western Europe's space program. The Foreign Ministry, reacting to news that Moscow had ordered six French nationals to leave the Soviet Union, admitted that it had ordered a similar number of Soviet officials to leave the country last Thursday.

Originally, the Foreign Ministry had said that it had requested the recall of only three Soviet diplomats in connection with espionage activities in the Seine valley, northwest of Paris. The main objective was reported to be a plant where motors for the European Space Agency's Ariane rocket series are

The ministry did not explain why it had kept the other three expul-sions secret, but it apparently was motivated by a desire not to barm relations with the Soviet Union as Prime Minister Jacques Chirac prepares to visit Moscow in May.

However, the Soviet reaction to the French moves made it clear that Moscow had no intention of minimizing the affair. The Soviet announcement of the tit-for-tat expulsions of six French officials broke with normal diplomatic practice.

It was made on the Soviet television news Saturday as the French ambassador, Yves Pagniez, was at the Soviet Foreign Ministry to re-ceive the official order. Normally, the announcement would not have been made public until the French Emhassy in Moscow had bad time to inform those concerned.

The Tass news agency reported that a Soviet woman who was selection of a president by a large electoral college; six years ago, it was easily rigged to guarantee the ratification of Mr. Chun as head of threatened her with rape. Altogether seven persons, five French, the Russian and a Romanian woman, have been charged with espionage.

The French Foreign Ministry said Sunday that the Soviet action against its citizens, four diplomats and two businessmen, was unjustified. It did not identify the Soviet citizens ordered out of France.

French news reports have said that the group's contact with the Soviet Embassy was Major Valeri Konorey, a deputy air attache. "It is a measure of pure retaliation, lacking any justification," the ministry said. The statement said the six breached their obligations." However, it maintained that all six Russians expelled had committed serious offenses.

In Moscow, Tass said that the Russians expelled from France were ordered out "without any proof of the accusation of activity not corresponding to their function and status. The Soviet side judged this ac-don as an openly unfriendly action having a clear political coloring and the aim of poisoning Soviet-French relations," Tass said. Soviet television said a first

"As a personal favor," Prime Minister Jacques Chirac of France asked the U.S. secretary of State, George P. Shultz, during his visit to Washington last

It was generated by the State Department's announcement on March 23 that because of hudgetary reasons it would close by Sept. 30 the Strasbourg post along with six other consulates, four of them in Europe.

The move is widely perceived here as a slap in the face at Western Europe by the Reagan administration at a time when the strength of its commitment to its European allies was already under question.

Unlike the majority of U.S. consulates, which function bilaterally to promote American interests in countries where they are located, the Strasbourg post has acquired multilateral diplomatic responsibility because of the presence here of the Council of Europe and the Eu-

"More than half" of the work of the Strasbourg consulate involves dealings with European institutions represented in Strasbourg, principally with the Council of Europe, Mr. Comras

In a message to Senator Clai-borne Pell, Democrat of Rhode Island and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Dante Fascell, Democrat of Plorida and chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Senator Jung declared: "Complete removal of the U.S. mission from Strasbourg will be taken as a sign that the U.S. no longer maintains the level of interest in the Council of Europe it has expressed in the past."

Such a message might seem all the more important," he warned, "at the very moment that Eastern Europe is beginning to express a greater interest in what we do.

The Alsatians were particularly affronted to find Strasbourg on the list of consulates to be closed in place of Lyon, which was named by the State Department in December as the French post that would be closed this year.

Gorbachev Postpones His Visit To Prague

By Jackson Diehl

PRAGUE - A visit here by Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, that was expected to have begun Monday has been delayed until later in the week because Mr. Gorbachev has "a slight cold," Czechoslovak government officials said Sunday.

The officials indicated that the decision to postpone the trip was made this weekend, on the eve of the Soviet leader's arrival for a scheduled stay of three days. They said that Mr. Gorbachev now would arrive "in the second half of the week" but refused to specify the

The sudden shift appeared to come as a surprise and embarrassment to the Czechoslovak Communist leadership, which had decorated Prague with banners and flags and accredited about 300 foreign journalists at a special press center in anticipation of Mr. Gorbachev's arrival on Monday. Crisis Talks Held in Peru As Troops Stage Protest Compiled by Our Staff From Disputches

LIMA - President Alan Garcia Pèrez held emergency meetings Sunday with his armed forces ministers as troops remained locked in two air bases to protest the dismissal of the air force commander.

President Garcia fired General Luis Abram Cavallerino on Friday for having met with political and military leaders in an attempt to block Mr. Garcia's plans to unify the three ministries of the army, navy and air force into a single defense ministry.

LONDON (Renters) — The mystery surrounding a series of deaths of British military experts deepened Sunday with the announcement that another scientist involved in sensitive projects had died in musual Three other scientists involved in secret military projects have died recently, and a fourth disappeared three months ago.

Police said Sunday that Peter Peapell, 46, a Ministry of Defense scientist until 1984, died Feb. 22 from carbon monoxide poisoning. Mr. Peapell was found under his car in the garage of his Oxfordshire home with the car engine running and the garage door shut, they said. The inquest into his death left the case open, but police said no further inquiries were in progress.

Soares, Facing Crisis, Back in Lisbon

LISBON (Reuters) — President Mário Sources returned to Portugal from an official visit to Brazil on Sunday, facing a political visit that has toppled the country's center-right government and undermined confidence in its expanding economy.

Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva's 17-month-old minority government collapsed Friday after a consure motion was approved in partiament by three leftist opposition parties.

Mr. Soares, who had been on a 12-day visit to Brazil; must decide whether to form a new government or call an early election.

Swiss Bank Corporation's message to the International Herald Tribune:

Sometimes it pays to tell the world how good you are.

The old adage in newspaper circles is: If you can't get a compliment any other way, pay yourself one. On this occasion, however, we'd like to do the honors for the International Herald Tribune.

Swiss Bank Corporation has many reasons to congratulate the "Trib" on its 100th anniversary. Successfully serving the international market over a century of turmoil and change is an achievement we can appreciate, because we grew up the same way to become an "AAA" rated bank. We know from our long experience around the world that the market we serve depends on free flows of information as well as financial flows. For economic forces to work properly in a free market system, the participants have to be well informed. One of the lessons we've learned in our own 115 years of existence is that the more the marketplace knows, the better we can compete.

Great newspapers and great banks have something else in common: their reputation is their most valuable asset. The exceptional strength of our balance sheet (capital base and liabilities base alike) ultimately rests on our reputation, so we feel we can tell quality when we see it.

A good newspaper is its own best advertisement, of course, but there is a lot to be said for the role of a healthy press in a democratic society and sometimes the editors have to say it themselves. The continued success of the International Herald Tribune is evidence that the international market. at least, has always been getting the message.

The sudden increase in Stinger deployment to a large number of Afghan rebel groups, and the looser procedures now said to govern who gets them, is raising renewed concern among some congressmen and those involved in the program that the weapon will fall into the hands of Iran or possibly Middle Eastern terrorists linked to Tehran.

Senator Deceis DeConcini, Democrat of Arizona, said in an interview last week that he has received a classified report from the General Accounting Office on the safeguards attached to the Stingers that are being sent or sold abroad. The Afghan rebels have already been furnished with a shipment of 150 of the surface-to-air missiles. It gives me great concern, but I can't go into it," he said.

He said he does not oppose arming the Afghan rebels with Stingers, but is worried about "keeping them from the black market."

The army chief of staff, General John A. Wickham Jr., and lawmakers such as Mr. DeConcini have expressed their concern in the past that Stingers might make their way into the black market and into the hands of terrorists who might seek to use the weapon, with its threemile (4.8-kilometer) range, to shoot down a civilian airliner.

Afghanistan and Pakistan are well known for their thriving and uncontrolled arms bazaars.

A source familiar with the U.S. Stinger training program for the rebels said that the initial procedures for assuring tight control are no longer being followed with the same rigor. In addition, so many Stingers are eow arriving in Paki-

U.S. Orders Increased Gulf Role For Navy

By Richard Halloran New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has ordered the U.S. Navy to increase its presence near the Gulf in an effort to fulfill President Ronald Reagan's pledge to keep oil flowing to allies in Europe and Japan, according to Pentagon officials.

The officials said Saturday that the navy would maintain the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk on station in the Arabian Sea and the rest of the Indian Ocean until May, three months longer than planned, and would then have a carrier battle group of six to eight warships sailthere at all times rather than part time, as occurs now.
In a new tactic, the officials said, the navy is considering plans to deploy battle groups centered on recently refurbished battleships to the Indian Ocean to relieve pressure on the carriers. The carriers often spend more than six months in continuous operations at sea. which takes a toll on sailors, ships and aircraft. The immediate threat to oil tank-ers sailing through the Strait of Hormuz into the Arabian Sea, an arm of the Indian Ocean, are antiship missiles that Iran has placed on its side of that passage. The Chinese-made missiles, with a range of 50 miles (81 kilometers), could dominate the strait.

In mid-March, American intelligence sources said they had spotted large land-based anti-ship missiles of a Chinese design known in the West as the HY-2 near the Strait of

The probability that Iran would actually cut off the strait is limited by its own eeed to ship oil through the passage, military analysts say.

American carriers or battleships would sail out of range of those missiles but within striking distance, the officials said. From several hundred miles at sea, carriers could launch aircraft bombing runs or missile strikes, and battleships could fire long-range missiles.

The chief spokesman for the Pentagon, Robert B. Sims, said the move came "in recognition of the Persian Gulf situation."

Medicare Reviews Hurt Rural Doctors

In recent months, doctors from Maine to California have been disqualified from receiving Medicare payments under a new program in which panels of physicians in each state review hospital records and recommend sanctions against doctors who do not measure up.

Disqualifications, just a few dozen so far, have fallen mostly on rural doctors. The New York Times reports. Often, they are the only doctors in remote areas, and old people may then have to travel long distances for quali-fied treatment. U.S. Seismic Devices In China Monitor Size Of Soviet Nuclear Tests

By Michael R. Gordon

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The United States is using monitoring devices in China to improve estimates of the size of Soviet nuclear tests, according to Defense Department cording to Defense Department ness government seismologists and documents and interviews with administration officials.

The seismic devices, which are manned by Chinese workers, have been installed under a U.S.-Chinese program to study earthquakes. One device is in the Xinjiang Uygar Autonomous Region, near the Sojiet nuclear test site, and the De-tense Department will use data from this and other instruments to improve U.S. monitoring abilities.

The data will "improve our yield estimation" of Soviet nuclear explosions, according to a budget document prepared last year by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, part of the Pentagon. The document also said the data would be useful in improving U.S. "discrimination capability" to dis-tinguish Soviet nuclear tests from earthquakes. Such an ability would be necessary to monitor a low limit on the size of underground tests or a total ban on testing.

The budget document was obained through the Freedom of Information Act by William M. Arkin of the Institute for Policy Studies, a nongovernmental research center. It was later made available to The New York Times.

Some U.S. government experts have long been interested in establishing a way to monitor Soviet nuclear tests from China. But China has resisted overt efforts at gathering intelligence about the tests. Last year, specialists at the Energy Department, which manages the nuclear testing program, expressed interest in negotiations with the Chinese to set up an advanced array of sensitive seismic devices in China to monitor Soviet tests, particularly explosions of very low

The Energy Department's plans were disclosed in budget docu-ments last year, before the United States and China had decided whether to conduct such talks. The disclosure distressed the Chinese, and the effort was dropped.

Despite this controversy, China and the United States proceeded with a separate project to establish nine monitoring stations in China,

China and the United States share the cost of the network, and the Defense Research Agency pays most of the U.S. costs.

U.S. officials said that although the network was completed last fall, minor technical problems still were being worked out. The officials said there was a delay of several months in receiving and analyzing the data from China. As a result, the United States has not had a chance to evaluate data on recent Soviet tests, which began in February, when Moscow ended an 18-month moratorium.

In 1981, it was reported that the United States and China were secretly operating an electronic intelligence-gathering station in China to monitor signals from Soviet missile tests. That project is different from the installation of the seismic devices, which is being done openly and primarily for scientific re-

Data on the size of Soviet tests are important because of the need to determine whether the Soviet Union is complying with two trea-ties from the 1970s that set a limit of 150 kilotons for underground nuclear explosions. A kiloton represents the explosive force of 1.000

A Kenyan Opposition Leader Assails Tyranny and Cultism' in Government

Washington Past Service

NAIROBJ - In the boldest public challenge to the authority of President Daniel arap Moi since a crackdown on dissent began here more than a year ago, a well-known opposition politician on Sunday denounced "tyranny and cultism" in the government and accused it of subjecting dissidents to "brutal and inhuman" treatment,

Oginga Odinga, a former vice president and longtime opposition leader who has broad political backing in western Kenya, said that the government has consistently used detention without trial to "silence criticism and opposition."

"The narrow and exclusivist base upon which the government is working means that those who manage the affairs of the state are so sensitive to criticism that they cannot draw a clear distinction between constructive criticism of government policies and subversion," said

Mr. Odinga has been identified with the ideological left in Kenya since the mid-1960s. His strong political power base among the Luo, Kenya's second largest tribe, has made him a potential threat to Kenya presidents. He was placed under house arrest by Mr. Moi for 18 months following an abortive coup in 1982.

Averting a Trade War

problems go beyond the purely bilateral:

The new trade war between the United States and Japan, if it takes place, will have emerged from limited origins; it could still be contained. The computer chips that Japan allegedly is dumping in foreign markets, to the detriment of U.S. producers, are hardly a major element in world trade. Ironically, many American computer companies rely on them and relish their cheapness. So Washington, stung into action, is not heaping countervailing taxes on the offending chips but on other electronics products that the errant Japanese companies sell on the U.S. market. If the drama stopped there, no great harm would be done.

But weeds spread fast. Japan may feel forced to retaliate, even though new steps to keep U.S. goods at bay would push the yen still higher and handicap Japanese exports more. And as Japan shifts its export offensive away from America, Europe will be tempted to raise its barriers ening confidence, simply expose the nether against Japanese goods.

Trade restrictions have no role in solving today's world economic problems. Japanese trading tactics are impure by countries, may not manage any positive internationally agreed standards, but they have not gotten clearly worse. But neither President Ronald Reagan nor Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone now enjoys the same political ascendancy as last year, and Chancellor Helmut Kohl shows small initiative. Unfortunately, these are the leaders who must act if the imbalances threatening the world trading system are to shrink.

There is still time, but precious little, to avert the war. April 1987 may be the economic equivalent of August 1939 -the last chance. Chile Needs a Unifier

General Augusto Pinochet rules Chile by default as well as by force. He is surrounded by opponents but they, unlike those who supplanted dictators in Argentina and the Philippines, have yet to transform themselves into a viable political opposition. Beyoud the courage to speak out, these oppo-nents need the wisdom to transcend division and establish a new pragmatic consensus.

Perhaps Pope John Paul II's journey there will belp. Though he insisted his mission was pastoral, he joined a global chorus of criticism denouncing the Pinochet regime's human rights atrocities. He, like the Roman Catholic Church in Chile, the U.S. Embassy and a range of Chilean political parties, expressed hope for an early transition to democracy and urged paths of conciliation and peace. But all the criticism, while warranted for torture, murder and terrorism, is not the same thing as construction of an effective political alternative. Since 1973. General Pinochet has dominated Chile because he has been able to exploit the divisions that vitiate his opponents' strength.

Compare Chile's situation with that of other societies struggling with a transition from dictatorship to democracy. Consider, as the pope did, the positive example of the Philippines. Chile may have its Ferdinand Who will unite its opposition factions into that is both practical and principled. a force that can govern successfully?

Consider Argentina, the pope's other main destination this trip, whose historic divisions run as deep as Chile's. In Raúl Alfonsin, Argentina found a democrat who could unite most of those who wanted to end military rule. It hastened matters that Argentina's military was first humiliated by losing the Falkland war. But even when dictatorship is discredited, democrats must still come up with workable alternatives.

Likewise consider South Korea, where internal and external forces jockey to influence the succession to General Chun Doo Hwan. Can democrats temper high principle with sufficient pragmatism to arrive at a unifying succession formula?

Deep divisions opened up among Chil-ean democrats as early as 25 years ago. The Games Airlines Play be, but anyone who tries to rely on it these artificial fare structures. The competition days knows only too well bow unreliable it can be. Overbooking is no longer an occasional event, it is a nasty babit of airlines, accompanied by little games to distract from the deception. Ticket-holding travelers arriving well in advance of alleged takeoff times are told that, sorry, they lose but they are eligible for another flight at some point or maybe even a free flight to somewhere else some other day. With luck - and perhaps an in-cabin, on-the-ground auction/raffle up and down the standingroom-only aisles - enough carefree travelers may take the bait to make room for those who have to keep an appointment.

The other side of overbooking, and it is difficult to document, is the undersold flight that somehow gets delayed or canceled for some vague reason. Add to these delays those that stem from totally unrealistic flight scheduling at airports that cannot possibly handle such volume, and you have the makings of unreliable, unacceptable service that screams for better oversight.

Is this a consequence of airline deregulation? Yes. But the answer is not a return to Air travel may be cheaper than it used to the old days of minimal competition and that drove many fares downward on the more beavily traveled routes has created a new market for standby passengers willing to entertain bonuses and seats on later flights: and in some instances lower fares may have tightened airlines' budgets enough to inspire some "cancellations" due to nothing more than a rash of empty seats.

But deregulation is not and should not be absolute. Just as it does not mean the dropping of safety regulations, it should not mean a hands-off policy when it comes to passenger service, flight schedules and computer reservation service. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole has outlined some of the changes in air traffic procedures that are under way; still others are called for, including more facilities, more air controllers and more sophisticated equipment. Bot America's airlines, whatever their names and routes turn out to be on any given day, should be on notice that an increasingly angry traveling public is looking to government for standards of service and enforcement to make the rules stick. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

Assessing Thatcher's Visit

Nobody should complain that Mrs. Thatcher signaled her interest in human rights [during her Moscow visit]. But, insofar as the prime minister still links arms control and human rights, she remains mistaken. Arms control agreements should be allowed to stand or fall on their intrinsic ments. [They] need to be to the clear and equal advantage of both sides. To achieve that is hard enough, without introducing linkage. - The Independent (London).

Too much attention has focused on arms control [wben] it is the level of mutual trust between East and West that is most important. In strengthening this, Mrs. Thatcher's visit must be considered entirely successful. - The Daily Telegraph (London).

Barre Makes The Flaws in the Afghanistan Negotiations

N EW YORK — While a flurry of diplomatic activity is under way to resolve the conflict in Afghanistan, the negotiations are basically flawed. They avoid the central issue in the conflict and would fall well short of assuring a durable solution.

A recent Soviet proposal makes the formation of a "national reconciliation" government a condition for the withdrawal of Soviet troops. Since such a government would basically be organized and dominated by Kabul's current rulers, the Soviet initiative is an attempt to consolidate by diplomatic means what it has all along sought to establish in Afghanistan: a Communist regime.

The Soviet game plan since 1979 has been to legitimize a Communist-dominated government. The Kremlin now wants to assure its survival by obtaining guarantees from Pakistan and the United States to cut off aid to the Afghan resistance before Soviet troops are withdrawn. It is likely, however, that if the war continues without outside support for the guerrillas, the Kremlin will nevertheless find an excuse not to withdraw all its soldiers.

Recent Soviet moves are also intended to create Recent soviet moves are also intended to create political confusion in Pakistan and register propaganda gains in the Moslem countries, America and developing nations that support the Afghan cause.

All along, the central issue of the conflict has been the illegitimacy of the Communist regime imposed by Moscow and the cruel methods used to force the population to accept its ideology. As a result, the population has suffered 1 million to 1.5

By M. Ishaq Nadiri

million casualties: the world's largest refugee population consists of Afghans; thousands have been tortured and thousands of children have been taken to the Soviet Union for indoctrination; and widespread destruction of farms and livestock has occurred, causing starvation and malnutrition.

The irony is that the issue of self-determination, for which the Afghans have made enormous sacrifices, is not being explicitly considered in the negotiation process. The guerrillas are excluded from the process while the regime in Kabul is involved in it. Yet a stable government cannot be established if the guernillas and their supporters are excluded.

The United Nations Security Council can remedy these deficiencies by organizing an internationconference to address key concerns. First, the issue of the self-determination and freedom of the Afghan people must take center stage, and a framework should be developed to allow all Afghans to elect a future government. This should prevent the current regime from sponsoring and organizing such an election.

Second, all issues between the Soviet Union and Afghanistan should be discussed between a and Afghanistan should be discussed between a representative government in Afghanistan and officials of the Kremlin. Only a representative government can provide guarantees for the Afghan people and provide the needed stability in relations among the governments of the region.

Third, the neutrality of Afghanistan must be guaranteed. This should entail abandoning the Soviet military bases that have been constructed, abrogating the friendship treaty signed by Kabul and Moscow, returning the annexed Afghan territories and giving assurances that there will be no further interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Fourth, these political steps must be accompanied by a program of economic reconstruction. Resettling as many as six million refugees from Pakistan and Iran, rebuilding villages, cities and roads that have been destroyed and restoring the agricultural sector will require sustained and substantial aid. Absent such an effort, the return of the refugees remains doubtful. And for humanitarian reasons, the Afghans should be given the means to put their society back together, an international fund should thus be set up under UN or World Bank auspices. In sum, the fate of the Afghans must not be decided without their participation.

In addition, rebuilding the Afghan economy is an obligation of the international community. What is now required is a serious diplomatic effort to settle the conflict and end the bloodshed. In the long run, this would be in the best interests of both anistan and the Soviet Union

America's Spy-Catchers Need Help By Allen E. Goodman

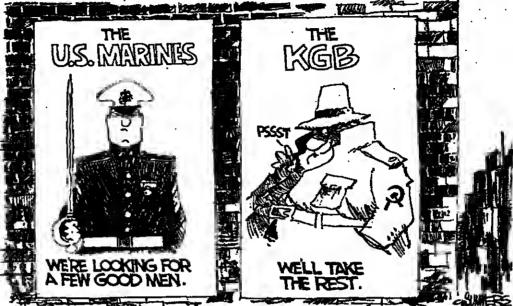

WASHINGTON - The com-W promise of security by ma-rine guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is the latest evidence that the American government's system for protecting secrets at home and abroad is grossly inadequate. Though more spies have been ar-rested and convicted in the past two years than in the past two decades combined, the U.S. counterintelligence effort has failed to live up to expectations on almost every score.

In February, before the Moscow incident, America's spy-catchers received a failing report card from the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. The report recounts a "litany of disasters," stemming from "lax security practice, inadequate interagency cooperation, even bungled surveillance of a prime espionage suspect," and says this points to a "serious management failure in the U.S. intelligence community."

Part of the remedy is to increase the efficiency of and the budget for counterintelligence operations. The spy-catching offices are second-class entities in the U.S. intelligence profession and consistently receive low it in a more centralized way, the priority when competing for funds and personnel with bureaus involved in intelligence collection.

But the most recent problems make me think that the Reagan administration should go even further and consider creating a single counterintelligence agency with its own budget and career service.

Spreading the counterintelligence mission across many agencies, some of them in competition, weakens the overall effort. A single agency would facilitate the coordination of operations and information-sharing.

By taking the job of counterintelligence more seriously and handling government could be much more effective at deterring foreign powers from trying to subvert American citizens into becoming their agents, and at detecting security violations and serious compromises sooner. Critics will say that such an agen-

would become an American KGB. Some oppose intensified efforts to investigate the backgrounds and activities of citizens who have access to sensitive information.

Admittedly, the counterintelligence job is a difficult one for American agencies to conduct. As Admiral Stansfield Turner, who was director of central intelligence under President Carter, wrote in a recent book: "There is no area of. intelligence activity more likely to abuse the rights of our citizens."

The challenge is to do counterintelligence without turning America into a police state. It can be met by creating a clear, comprehensive charter under which such a new agency would operate, one that would safeguard Americans' civil liberties.

Revamping counterintelligence should be an urgent priority for the incoming director of central intelli-gence, William Webster.

The Microchip Mess: A Bad Ending to a Bad Accord

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's punitive trade to sell microchips below cost is the direct result of an unenforceable cartel agreement it made with Japan in July that attempted to fix worldwide prices for semiconductors. It is clear in retrospect, as it was to some officials from the start, that this deal was unworkable: Semi-conductors were and are in huge oversupply and any attempt to set prices above Japanese costs was doomed to failure.

They were right: Once set in motion, the cartel deal self-destructed. But it led to a unanimous decision to slap a $300 million tanff penalty on Japanese electronics companies. The events leading to that March 27 decision by the Economic Policy Council indicate that President Reagan's weakened power played a key role in In more normal circumstances, a

But the other two undertakings were foothardy: Japan agreed to stop

tus following the Iran-contra affair, and in the face of a determined bipartisan protectionist drive on Capitol Hill, the administration succumbed to relitical pressure.

When the Senate called for retaliation against Japan by a nonbinding 93-0 vote, the message for the president was clear. "He made a good move," said Senator Max Baucus, Democrat of Montana, "because sometimes you have to act to estabhish credibility."

The reason the effort to fix the price of semiconductors was doomed was that the Japanese government undertook three commitments, two of which it could not guarantee. The first was to quit damping the micro-chips in the United States, and as of now, the U.S. side concedes that such dumping has stopped (and American Administration officials did not an-

To Mr. Barre's left, President Mil terrand is urging the French not to give in to greed, but to protect the Socialist gains enacted under his reign. The bedrock of Mr. Berre's newfound popularity is the clarity with which he has expressed his opposi-tion to the cohabitation arrangement that Mr. Chirac's victory in the National Assembly a year ago brought into being. French voters confused by the conflict that periodically surfaces in this arrangement turn in relief to what they perceive to be Mr. Barre's constancy and coherence.

He has been steadily gaining ground in opinion polls here over the past six months, the most recent show him edging out both Mr. Mitterrand and Michel Rocard, the most likely candidate for the Socialists if Mr. Mit-terrand does not run. Mr. Chirac's

The military finality of destroying the Aozou base worries those strategists who contend that the success of French policy has been to keep the Chadians, and not French troops, on the front lines. French troops returned to Chad in 1986 for the fourth time since the country became independent in

was a Paris Herald reporter and aditor from 1929 to 1933, when he returned to the States to rejoin the Baltimore Sun. He bas published many short stories, essays and novels and today, in retirement, contraues to contribute to the Sun's editorial page

By R.P. Harriss

The long run of the Old Philadelphia Lady in the Paris Herald letters column was a hard act to follow. but when I arrived on the paper in 1930, 12 years after she stopped showing up every day, the Mailbag itself was going strong.

I was then a brash young sprig, larely of the Baltimore Sun, full of Menckenism and other mischief, and after I had settled on the Left Bank and the Herald had got itself moved from Les Halles into its new building at 21, rue de Berri, I was for a while assigned to edit the Mailbag.

That was an angst-ridden job, for whoever did it had to please everybody — Managing Editor Eric Hawkins, who egged me on; Director Laurence Hills, who held me back; and, of course, the Herald readers, who doted on the Mailbag and complained when their letters weren't printed. Why? Sometimes, their offerings were crowded out by letters written by Herald staffers under various plausible pseudonyms. Among those who had edited the Mailbag before me was novelist Elliot Paul, whose sly wit had infused many a Mailbag letter not signed with his

did. One fellow was so excited that instead of mailing his letter he brought it to the Herald newsroom, along with his dog - an Afghan hound, a bizarre and, at that time, new and fashionable breed. Obviously this dog-walker had seen an attractive girl looking at his pooch, had been smitten with her, and was most frequent letter writers was the brilliant but erratic poet Ezra Pound, who from his hideaway at Rapallo, Italy, bombarded the Herald with largely incoherent screeds on world economics. Another and far more welcome letter-writer was the humorist Gelett Burgess, no longer well-known but still famous then for his "Purple Cow" poem. Pearls from Burgess were rare, however, and eagerly printed, while Pound for several years besieged both the Herald and the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribuns with little success. Hawkins considered

Pound a crackpot. His letters often were so badly typed as to be almost illegible, and occasionally were incoherent with rage. Sometimes they were filled with four-letter scatological invective which no papers of that era would have

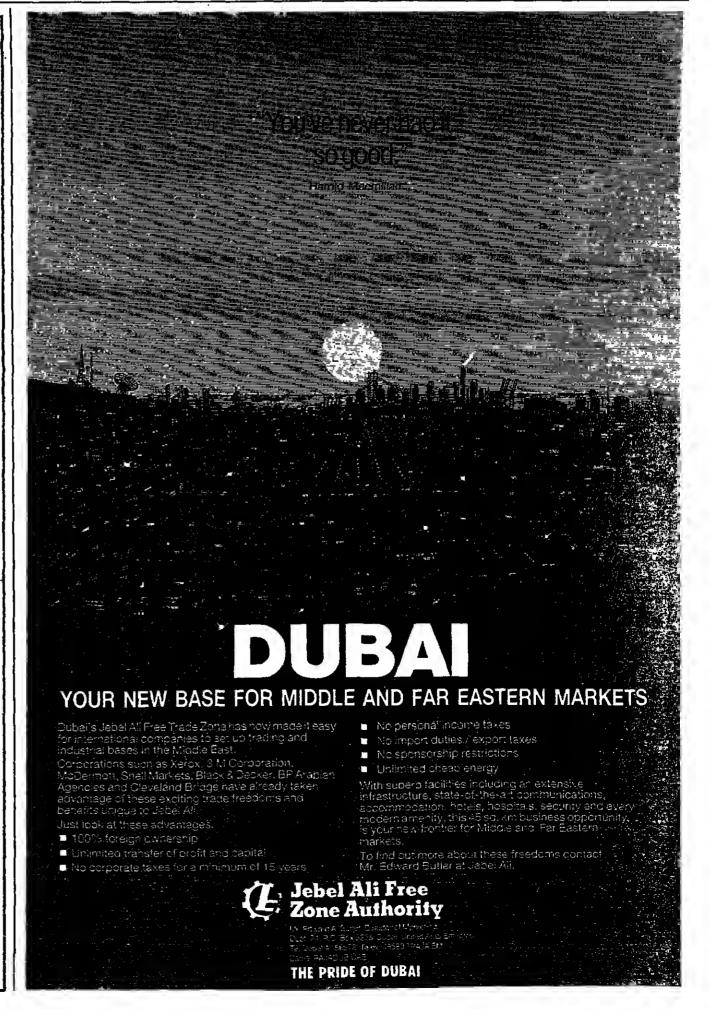

Most of Pound's letters were typed on personal letterhead stationery bearing his name, address and a powerful line portrait of himself, printed in dark red.

My tenure as Mailbag editor ended surprisingly when Hawkins called me up to his desk and asked if I had a dinner jacket. He wanted to assign me to accompany a delegation of 25 American mayors on a 35day, deluxe tour of France. "Have tux, will travel!"

While nightclubs in calmer areas of West Beirut are reopening less than two miles (three kilometers) away, the camp's community of 9,500 people is surviving under

There are countless tales of horror and brutality registered in the diaries of three foreign medical personnel there.

Dr. Pauline Cutting, a British surgeon, has worked at the Haifa Hospital in Beirut since 1985. The other two foreigners are Susan Wighton, a Scottish nurse, and Mr. Alofs, the Dutch ourse.

The most recent incident involved Hazji Ali, 23, who was shot through the head and pelvis by a sniper on Wednesday. She was left lying at the Mashnouq entrance to Burj al-Brajneh for an hour before two girls gathered the courage to go get her. She did oot survive. "We would have preferred to eat the flesh of our martyrs before giving in" to the Amal militia, said Shamiya Mohammed Musa, 55, a camp resident. We stopped thinking of the dead, only of the living.

"I am happy here, my family is around me. We are together here, there are heroes defending us."

Most Palestinian males have not left the camp since the summer of 1985, when the first serious round of Amal clashes with the Palestinians began.

The fighting intensified five months ago, when Palestinian guerrillas in the south captured the strategic village of Maghdousheh, near Sidon. It was the first time the Palestinians had fought outside the refugee camps since their defeat by Israel in 1982, and Amal was determined to make them retreat.

Market Descends in Gloom Without Japanese Investors

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS—Volumes have been written about the glow given to financial markets by the investment outflows from Japan. The possibility of a reversal Japan. The possibility of a reversal — an unspoken nightmare — draws less comment. But last week markets got a small taste of what life without the Japanese looks like. In a

The Japanese power to move markets is enormous. Last year, for example, Japa-nese investors bought $1,4 trilhon of foreign bonds - a 2,290 percent increase from ing amount, but net purchases were still a very imposing $93 billion, a rise of 243 percent.

U.S. bankers believe the Japanese have no choice, and will return to the market.

The bulk of this is invested in dollars, in U.S. Treasury paper. The feared tidal wave of selling never did develop last week.

Intervention by the Bank of Japan and its rare public "jawboning" of domestic banks to stay out of the foreign exchange market kept the dollar's loss to a modest 2.5 percent, to 146 ven. Talk about an accord on semiconductor production also made it appear possible that the U.S. would withdraw its threat to impose tariffs starting April 17.

tariffs starting April 17.

Nevertheless, prices in the dollar bond market, which was weakening even before the rattling of trade sabers, continued to ease. By week's end, yields on five-year Eurodollar bonds were up 20 basis points, or 0.20 percentage points, to 7.43 percent. Yields on 10-year bonds had risen 27 basis points, to 8.15 percent.

Unsure where rising yields will settle and wary about the value of the dollar. Iconnece investors were little inclined to return to

of the dollar, Japanese investors were little inclined to return to the dollar bond market. But continued net buying is needed to keep U.S. interest rates steady.

U.S. bankers believe the Japanese will return to the market.
These bankers insist the Japanese have no choice. With so much money to invest and such a large appetite for trading they need big, liquid markets like the U.S. Treasury market and, to a smaller scale, the Eurodollar bond market.

T PRESENT, there is a standoff and the calendar of new A issues in the Europond market may week of the year, which was issues in the Eurobond market last week shriveled to its truncated by the New Year's holiday.

U.S. bankers say this is temporary, due to last week's market volatility and the March 31 close of the fiscal year that has Japanese bankers locked in meetings discussing strategy for the

But some Japanese analysts doubt there will be a major return to dollar bonds of any variety — Canadian, Australian or New Zealand. — which are closely linked to the fortunes of the U.S.

For now, they report, money is staying mainly in yen and increasingly moving into the domestic stock market, where prices set a record high last week. Money that moves offshore will go to the nondollar currencies, they say, mainly the Dentsche mark and, after a period of some neglect, the Swiss franc.

Some analysis speculate that increasing investments will be made in gold real estate and the purchase of real assets as opposed to financial assets.

There was evidence last week of a return to the Deutsche mark,

Frankfurt bankers said. Japanese preference for federal government bonds is credited with widening the traditional yield gap between federal paper and issues from state agencies or banks. Normally, yields on short-term paper issued by state agencies are 10 basis points more than government paper. Last week the yield gap was a wide 45 basis points. The yield on paper issued by banks was 60 basis points over the government paper, almost double the spread of 35 basis points prevailing only a month ago. Domestic German investors, meanwhile, are expected to turn to the Euromarket where they get a significant increase in yield over domestic paper. East Asiatic Co. last week issued 150 million DM of five-year notes at 1001/4 bearing a coupon of 51/2 percent. The paper moved slowly, trading at a discount of 1.9 points to yield around 5.85 percent, some 65 basis points more than domestic bank paper.

Ireland's 10-year issue, priced at 100½ and bearing a coupon of 6½ percent, also traded at a 1.9 point discount, yielding some 30. basis points over domestic bank paper. The narrower yield gap and the current aversion to long-term commitments makes placing 10-year Eurobonds more difficult.

The Euroyen market, normally a favorite with Japanese investors, was meeting resistance as offering yields dropped to levels See EUROBONDS, Page 11

Growth Steps Up

Survey Reports March Expansion

NEW YORK - The growth rate of the U.S. economy improved in March compared with the previous month, according to the latest sur-vey of the nation's purchasing managers, published Monday.

The National Association of Purchasing Managers said its com-posite index increased to 53.9 percent in March from 51.9 percent in February. A reading above 50 percent on the composite index, which is the only part of the report that is seasonally adjusted, generally indi-cates the economy is expanding.

The survey reported improvement in all categories except inven-tories, which declined slightly. New orders increased, production was higher and employment expanded for the first time since August 1984.

"The economy ended the first quarter with a healthy, if not substantial, improvement," said Robert I. Bretz cheirman of the comert J. Bretz, chairman of the committee that conducted the survey and a purchasing manager with Pit-

ney Bowes Inc.
New orders showed a sharp increase, according to the survey. The percentage of purchasers reporting more new orders jumped to 41 in March from 33 in February, while just 9 percent reported fewer new orders, compared with 15 percent the month before.

"The sharp rise in the growth of new orders assures a good begin-ning for the second quarter," Mr.

Purchasers reporting increased production in March rose to 34 percent in March from 31 percent in February. For the second consecutive month more than three times as many purchasers reported increased production as reported production decreases.

Inventories were reduced in March. Nineteen percent of the purchasing managers reported lower inventories in March than the percent who posted increases.

just 6 percent said prices declined.

GM Puts Hopes on 2 New Compacts

New York Times Service WARREN, Michigan shark's fin glides through dark blue water and then a car emerges from the deep. The clear message of the television com-mercial is that the 1988 Chevrolet Beretta is as sleek and aggressive as a shark, and, even more important, a break from General Motors Corp.'s recent run of undistinguished lookalike cars.

The new Beretta sports coupe is one of two new compacts that GM's big Chevrolet division is hoping will start to rebuild its own - and its parent's - erodmg share of the car market.

Chevrolet officials are counting on the two-door Beretta and its four-door, more conservatively styled cousin the Corsica to generate combined sales of 500,000 cars a year. This could recapture two of the three and a half percentage points of market share that GM has lost since Reflecting how critically GM views the success of its new offerings. Chevrolet is giving away bundreds of the oew cars in a sweepstake aimed at drawing as many as three million potential car buyers into its showrooms. "This is one of the most cru-

Western Nations Plan Relief for Poorest Debtors

By Paul Lewis

New York Times Service KNOKKE HET ZOUTE, Belgium — Western industrial nations are planning new steps to ease the financial plight of the poorest developing countries, European fi-nancial officials said.

The Belgian finance minister, Mark Eyskens, said Saturday that the major Western aid-giving na-tions, at a meeting in Washington this week, would offer more generous relief to these countries when they are forced to renegotiate re-payment on their debts to Western governments. Most of the countries that would benefit are in black Af-

Mr. Eyskens said the offer would be announced at a meeting in Washington of the International Mooetary Fund's governing inter-im committee and its joint development committee with the World Bank. It would greatly extend the time given the poorest developing countries to repay debts they cannot meet.

Officials said the nations, commonly known as the Paris Club, plan to reschedule these countries' debts over periods of 15 to 20 years instead of the usual 7 to 10 years. . He also said the terms on which deht repayment was extended would be made more generous in other ways. Many of the poorer developing countries have relied heavily on these loans from Western governments, being unable to attract large commercial bank loans. Banks were reluctant to lend even before several large debtors to face a cash-flow crunch.

Mr. Eyskens said France, with support from some other European nations, wanted to go even further by earmarking a special loan fund operated by the IMF exclusively to elp the most deeply indebted developing countries. But be said the United States and several other Western nations had "reserva-tions" about the Freneb plan.

Mr. Eyskens made his remarks as he reported on informal talks Saturday by the finance ministers of the 12 European Community na-tions at this Belgian resort. The finance ministers sought to prepare the position they will take at the meetings in Washington.

"New debt defaults seem inevitable, and we must make the handling of them easier for developing countries," Mr. Eyskens said,

The finance ministers also reaffirmed their support for the Paris currency accord reached Feb. 22, in which six major Western financial powers agreed to stabilize the dol-lar's value at about its current level.

That agreement appeared to be in danger last week when the dollar renewed its fall against the Japa-nese yen, forcing Western central banks to spend $8 billion to $10 billion supporting the dollar on financial markets.

But Mr. Eyskens and several other finance ministers said that they believed the Paris accord was still working and that the dollar was likely to remain at around its cur-

France Sets Bank's Price

PARIS — The French government set the public offer price of shares in the state-owned Banque du Bâtiment & des Travaux Publics at 130 francs, valuing the bank at 416 million francs ($68.5 million). the Finance Ministry has said.

The public share offer is to open Monday and close Friday. A total of 51 percent of the capital, 1.63 million shares, is allocated to investor groups that responded to invitations for tenders. The biggest allocation, 20.5 percent, was to a group comprising Fédération Nationale du Bâtiment and three other construction-related bodies. A further 1.07 million shares will be sold to the public and 300,000 shares, or 10 percent of shares on offer, will be reserved for employees of the bank. The state will keep 200,000 to permit it to proceed with

In the Euroyen market, the World Bank announced last week that it had repaid and refinanced 515 billion yen in syndicated loans. Interest on the old loans had ranged from 7 to 9 percent and were refinanced at a rate of 5.8 percent, the long-term prime rate of Japanese banks.

Eugene Rotberg, treasurer of the World Bank, said in an interview that he was looking at all markets to see where it would be appropriate to call existing debt for early redemption, but added that this would not be massive. He estimated that less than $10 billion of the bank's existing $77 billion debt load would be likely to fall into this

The bank also last week called two public Swiss franc bond issues. Mr. Rotberg said the moves reflected his frequently expressed view that interest rates, which may yet decline further, are likely to be higher within a year than they are

> From the viewpoiot of Mr. Thomson and his partners on the five-man management committee of Hudson's Bay, selling the stores made sound business sense. The operations were only marginally profitable, and their sale would significantly reduce interest on the buge debt, now about 2,2 billion dollars, that has been a major factor in the heavy losses incurred by Hodson's Bay in recent years.

Elsewhere, however, particularly among long-term employees of of a historical trust. Although the porthern stores will continue to operate under the new ownership, critics fear that Mutual Trust and its partners may lack the resources to keep some of the more remote ones open. Baker, Hughes Tool Complete Delayed $1.2 Billion Merger

Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES - The much-delayed merger of Baker Internadonal Corp. and Hughes Tool Co. has been completed, creating a company with more than $2 billion in annual revenue and a leadership position in the manufacture of oil-drilling equipment. The merger, first announced last October, takes the form of a $1.2

Its consummation, which occurred Priday, seemed in jeopardy s few weeks ago when the companies were at loggerheads over terms of a Justice Department consent decree meant to forestall anti-competitive repercussions of the transaction.

Ultimately, both agreed to the sale of Baker's domestic electrical submersible pump operation and of most of Baker's highly valued Reed Tool division, a maker of rock bits used in oil well drilling. the back nine to finish with a 3-under-par 69 and sole possession of the lead after Saturday's third round of the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament. Simpson had a three-day total of 4-under-par 212. Tom Byrum, fired a par 72 on Saturday and was second with a 213 total.

After bolting to 7-under-par with three birdies in the first six holes, Danny Edwards, the second-round leader, bogeyed five holes to finish at 76 and a 215 total, with Clarence Rose, Payne Stewart, Brian Clarence Sauers. T.C. Chen, the first-round leader with a 68, ballooned to a 76 Friday and a 77 Saturday for 221. Saturday's round was delayed after heavy rain and lightning had halted play on Friday. The second round was completed Saturday morning as snow fell.

Indians Sign Carlton, 42, as Relief Pitcher

TUCSON, Arizona (AP) — Steve Carlton, a starter throughout his 22 years in major league baseball, signed Friday with the Cleveland Indians and will become a middle-inning relief pitcher. Carlton, 42, a left-hander and a four-time winner of the Cy Young Award, failed in a bid to rejoin the Philadelphia Phillies on March 21 after allowing seven earned runs in a total of 14 innings in exhibition games. After being on the disabled list for much of the 1985 season, he pitched with Philadelphia, the San Francisco Giants and the Chicago White Sox last year.

"He's healthy, and the point is he can fall out of bed and pitch two innings," said Joe Klein, Cleveland's vice president.

Carlton, who was with the Phillies for 15 years, has a career record of 323-229 and an ERA of 3.11. He is second to Nolan Ryan on the all-time strikeout list with 4,040. His last Cy Young Award was in 1982.

Quotable

 Texas Ranger pitcher Charlie Hough, on teammate Pete Incaviglia, who led American League outfielders in errors last season: "He has a glove contract with U.S. Steel."

Coach Bobby Knight after his Indiana team won the NCAA basketball tournament: "I was rooting for Penn State and Joe Paterno to win the fontball championship. I think it's great that two teams with high graduation rates and oo recruiting garbage can win national championships in the same season. Maybe people will look at that and say, Well, if they can do it that way, so can we."

Cashen said. They permeate all levels of life, Wall Street, Main Street, the ghetto-And they are insidious problems. Nobody argues with that. But, when people start searching for reasons, they also start sniping. And some heavy sniping broke out last week between two of Gooden's closest allies: Darryl Strawberry, his close friend and team-family living in it: his mother Ella and his father Dan (who retired from work years ago with a damaged hip), his sister Betty Jones and his son, Dwight Jr., who was born in March last year and acknowledged in November.

They even agree that he needs to break out. And while those closest to him believe that the problem comes from his home and his hometown, perhaps only Gooden may know for sure.

"I know him best," Strawberry said. "In 1984, when he came up to the big leagues, I looked at him and saw myself. I had been through rough times the year before as a rookie and I thought: Maybe I can help him. ... There comes a time in your life when you have to make changes. People pick at you all the time. I wish he'd get the hell out of Tampa. It seems it's one mess after another. I told him not to stay with his old crowd in Tampa."

Reed bristled when he heard that "I don't know who he's talking about," he said. "Pvery time I see Dwight, I see Strawberry.

Now, having messed up his life, instead of pening the baseball season Tuesday in the spot-"But I think he needs to deal with other people. They hang around him. At this stage, they've got to turn him loose. Travel, man. Go light of the mound in Shea Stadium, he will be watching the Mets on TV from his room in the somewhere. Dwight's got the money. He's only Smithers treatment center on Manhattan's East 22, now's the time to get out and meet new Side. And, as the Mets receive their World Series friends....You've got to grow."

Since he hit the big leagues with a roar in 1984, Gooden has lived in two worlds.

In New York and elsewhere around the country, he was Doctor K, the pitcher who set yearnings of a child, the pressures of an adult and the money of a tycoon. And the mixture

"His problems are not peculiar to youth," shen said. "They permeate all levels of life, still the same neighborhood star.

He zoomed into the big leagues in 1984. In his first two seasons, he won 41 games and lost 13, striking out 544 batters. Back home, he bought the Mercedes and the Porsche and a house for his mother and father. It was bigger and better than the house he knew as a child - but it was only about 10 blocks mate, and Billy Reed, his old baseball coach. away. That's how much he was chinging to the trapped by his boyhood "friends" in the life of with the guys, some of whom were with him last Tampa police officers who had stopped him for huge fish in a tiny pond. They agree that he has Tampa police officers who had stopped him ich been tied to the house on East Elm and to the a traffic violation. Gooden was charged with two felony counts, pleaded no contest and was placed on probation for three years. He was king of the hill after the 1985 season. when he led the big leagues with 24 victors and only 4 losses, an earned-run average of 1.53 and 268 strikeouts. But early in 1986, his world began to take some strange turns:

In January, he sprained an ankle but ne-glected to inform the Mets until word leaked out 10 days later. . In March, he became the father of a son born to one of his high school friends. · In April, he was with his sister and his then fiancée, Carlene Pearson, when they got into a loud argument with a car-rental clerk at La-Guardia Airport.

• In the regular season, he won his first five starts, but then stopped bowling em over. He finished with 17 victories and 6 losses, outstanding oumbers for any pitcher.

• In the playoff and World Series he was 0-3. o In December, the the fight with the Tangels police: three weeks after that, Pearson rrested for carrying a stolen and concealed pissol as she went through LaGuardia Airport

Trading on the Amsterdam stock exchange last week displayed a firm tone, reflecting foreign influences and favorable annual reports from Dutch companies.

The ANP-CBS general index rose to 283.9 from 280.4, with volume down to 6.174 billion guilders from 7.510 billion the previous week. Trading on Monday was depressed in response to major losses recorded earlier on Wall Street. The fail was limited on Tuesday, thanks to promising performances by Royal Dutch, AKZO and Unilever. Despite pressure on AKZO on Wednesday. the index advanced, a trend sustained the following day in response to a firmer doller.

The Frankfurt stock exchange, which started to gain momentum in late March, remained well-oriented last week, with share prices advancing 3 percent on Wednesday alone.

The Commerzbank index gained 55.9 points to hit 1,835.3. Volume rose to 22,609 billion Deutsche marks from 19.357 billion last week. The trend was bolstered by a firmer dollar at. the start of the week and was sustained by encouraging results from Siemens, Deutsche Bank, Commerzbank and Bayer.

Siemens moved up 37 DM to 714, while among automobiles BMW rose 23 DM to 543 and Volkswagen put on 11.80 to close at 362.80.

Schering, in pharmaceuticals, closed 17 DM stronger at 625. Banks were highly sought. Commerzbank rose 4 DM, Dresdner 8,50 DM and Deutsche Bank 9 DM.

Hong Kong

Controversy over a 'B' share issue by Cheung Kong and Hutchison Whampoa, leading Hong Kong companies, and uncertainty about U.S.-Japan trade friction saw the Hang Seng Index lose 118.75 points on the week to close Friday at 2,679.99.

Bearish sentiment took the lead from Monday, reversing the previous week's trend.

Monday's modest fall of 23.86 points in the Hang Seng was dwarfed by a drop of 61.07 points in hectic selling Tuesday when overseas institutions sold amid wornes about the U.S-Japan trade dispute. Near-pamic selling con-tinued early Wednesday.

London

The London Stock Exchange suffered a large-scale shakeout the past week, wiping over £10 billion off the value of shares.

Over the course of the week, the Financial Times 30-share index tumbled 74.2 points, registering its biggest one-day fall ever Mon-day, to close on Friday at 1,546.4, its lowest level for seven weeks. Early heavy setbacks in New York and Tokyo, triggered by growing tensions over Ja-pan's trade imbalance with Western countries, prompted widespread selling at the outset Monday. The decline was later fueled by news of a quarter-point rise in U.S. prime rates. All sectors came under pressure, with exporting stocks shaken by the growing strains on world currency markets and government bonds and consumer-related issues unsettled by fading hopes for another cut in British bank

Banks and insurances fell sharply on fears of repercussions to possible trade sanctions against Japanese finance houses in London.

Milan

After a gloomy start to the first quarter of 1987, Milan stocks rose for the third consecutive week, notching up a 1.17 percent increase in the Comit index, which closed at 723.97.
Iniziativa Meta, of the Montedison group, rose 5.85 percent, and provisional estimates said dealing in Iniziativa shares rose 170 percent in volume over the previous week.

According to market rumor, there was heavy buying by the Ferruzzi sugar group, which now has a stake of at least 40 percent in Montedison, or by the parent firm itself.

Montedison itself, however, closed 3.16 percent lower. ent lower.

First ordinary shares closed the week with a

2.01 percent gain because of heavy buying abroad, but also on the back of rumors that the company was going to float a loan in order to pay for its purchase last September of shares formerly beld by Libya.

Paris

Share prices on the Paris Bourse fell by around one percentage point last week in trading that was marketly less active than the previous week.

A rise of a quarter percentage point in pring lending rates charged by U.S. banks was poorly, received on Wall Street and had similar ercussions on the Bourse, where the CAC index fell from 459 to 456.9. After four straight days of sluggish and irregular trading, the market turned more bouyant on Friday, when the index rose from 452.7 on Thursday to 456.9 as foreign investors were reported to have been particularly active:

Singapore

The Singapore stock market ended on a lackluster note last week that analysts said was largely caused by external factors.

Investors and speculators noted with concom a possible trade war between the United States and Japan and the coming United Ma-lays National Organization elections in Malay-sia that are likely to affect the political leader-

But towards the last two days shortcovering and bargain hunting took prices up slightly and saw the Straits Times industrial index record us first rise for the week on Friday. The index, after falling to a low of 1,043.94 points, recovered to close at 1,075.18.

Tokyo Share prices on the Tokyo Stock Market skyrocketed last week, with the key market indicators renewing record highs. The 225-issue Nikker Stock Average closed

Saturday at 22,738.67 yea, up 327.82 yea over the previous day. It was the third consecutive record for the average last week, and compared with a 368.99 gain the previous week.

On Monday, the index planged amid massive selling of export-oriented blue chips after the dollar dipped to a record low of 144.70 year at one stage.

But bargain-hunting on some blue chips and domestic demand-related issues almost offset the early losses by the end of the morning

From Wednesday, which marked the beginning of the new fiscal year, the market turned bullish.

Tokyo Electric Power was the most conspicuous performer, finishing at an all-time high of 8,950 yen Friday, up from 8,600 yen a week Analysts said there was further good news on the horizon in the form of lower integers: demand and expectations of a more aggressive fiscal policy.

Share prices advanced on the Zurich stock exchange last week as foreign investors, awaiting a possible drop in the dollar, checked their selling orders.

The Credit Suisse index closed at 545.9 points, up from 538.8 on March 27. An exception to the stronger trend last week was the chemicals section, where Sandoz bearer shares fell 200 Swiss francs to 11,300.

Banks and finance companies were well sup-ported, with UBS gaining 35 to reach 5,360 and Motor Colombus adding 95 to reach 1,825.

A'60s Seagull Flies Again

By Myra Forsberg matic grace. "I wasn't a name," she recalls. "I wasn't commercial. I wasn't on the list."

chine, Hershey's achievement is still remarkable, rivaled this year only by her "Hoosiers" co-star Dennis Hopper.

Coincidentally both Hopper and Hershey were symbols of the 60s. While Hopper evoked the motorcycle-riding, pot-smoking, born-to-be-wild essence of '60s counterculture in "Easy Rider," Hershey, with her open manner and lifestyle, seemed to embody the ultimate flower child.

Not only did she portray freshfaced hippies on celluloid in such films as "The Pursuit of Happiness." "Dealing" and "The Baby Maker," she also personified a free spirit off screen when she moved in with the actor David Carradine, had a bahy out of wedlock named Free, and changed her name to Barbara Seagull. The name change came in the late '60s during the filming of Frank and Eleanor Perry's "Last Summer," in which Hershey played a teen-age viper who is part flirt, part con artist and part psychotic: a dangerous temptress capable of coolly bashing in the hrains of a seagull that she once befriended.

As she described it in a 1973 interview, there was a scene where I had to throw the bird up in the air, trying to make it fly. The trained bird was very special, I felt her spirit. But we had to reshoot the scene over and over. I knew she was exhausted, and I told Frank Perry that I couldn't throw her again; and he told me

"At that moment I felt her soul A DECADE ago, Barbara Her-shey had fallen from cine-a long time. I just realized, finally, that the only honest, moral thing would be to change my name."

I hate Although comebacks are noth- it. To keep talking about it seems ing new for the moviemaking ma- to perpetuate it and I really don't

> What she prefers to underscore is her commitment to acting, despite the hardships. "There were times when I thought the business might not want me," says Hershey, who was born and reared in Los Angeles and started acting in television when she was 17.

The tough times included some forgettable films in the mid-70s and some forgettable television in the late '70s. But then she was offered a part that would become the turning point of her career: Nina Franklin in Richard Rush's 1980 movie, "The Stunt Man." Richard made me try out very hard for a very long time," Her-shey recalls. "And he fought to get me because the financiers didn't want me. I'll be forever beholden to him for that."

After "The Stunt Man" came a run of important "womeo's roles": Carla Moran in "The Entity" (1983); Glennis Yeager in "The Right Stuff" (1983), and Harriet Bird in "The Natural" (1984).

It was during the filming of "The Natural," in which Hershey portrays the mysterious siren who shoots Robert Redford, that she met Barry Levinson. What both the director and actress remember most about that first encounter is "the hat."

"I was doing wardrobe before I had even talked to Barry about the character," she recalls. "I thought it would be a big challenge to create a whole character pointing out all their faults -she in essentially one scene. So I tried on these clothes, and they brought out this hat and as soon as I put it on my head, I relaxed. I immediately recognized the character something seemed so right about the hat. So I went on the set and Barry came up to me and the first words out of his mouth were that goes.' I didn't want to cause trou-ble, yet the hat was my anchor. So I quietly kept at it - I was like a dog with a bone - and he finally gave in."

The hat became a striking prop in the film, and illustrates a facet of Hershey that Levinson greatly admires: "She stays with her convictions," he says. "During a film, she presents her case. She has certain ideas and she's not afraid to tell von about them."

Last year, when Levinson was casting "Tin Men," he immediately thought of Hershey for the role of Nora, the woman who finds herself smack in the middle of a war between two aluminumsiding salesmen. "The film oeeded to be grounded in some way for the comedy to work, and Nora is really the anchor of the piece," he says. "And when, as Nora, she says all those things about these male characters on screen - doesn't come off as too pious or overbearing."

The "Hanuah" role was, Hershey puts it, "a wonderful gift. I had just moved to New York and after years of auditioning, I walked into Woody's office and he essentially gave me the role."

While getting the part was easy, shooting the film was oot. "I just fell in love with the role and I came in with lots of wonderful ideas that Woody didn't like and I had to just let go of them. Because I realized what's the point of doing a Woody Allen movie unless you're going to do it his way. And as soon as I gave myself to him as an actor, it was great. I relaxed.

"For instance, he wanted me to wear no makeup. I've never done a film with no makeup before. And he wanted me dressing very down, and I wanted to wear fonny clothes like Dianne Wiest. But then I realized what he was after - that he wanted a simplicity from me, which is not the engiest thing to do, by the way. As an actor you want to elaborate, you want to act, and to retreat from that and be very simple is something he had to teach me for the role. But once I understood it, it was just delightful."

the pretty sister who is the object of Michael Caine's obsession; in 'Hoosiers" she is a '50s-era school marm who is instantly suspicious of the new coach, played by Gene Hackman.

"I tried to find the parts of me that were in her — she's very angry and she's very repressed and she's very unhappy," Hershey says. "She never took the chance to leave the town and evolve. She's kind of like Nora in 'Tin Men,' except she oever took the chance Nora did, and because of that she lives vicariously through her students."

Hershey, who has homes in both California and Connecticut, is currently in Santa Monica with her 14-year-old son, Tom. She doesn't know what's coming up next after "Shy People," the Andrei Konchalovsky film she recently completed - "I've mmed down some scripts and that's always a terrible feeling."

For now, she is pleased with her film success, but cautious: "Td be a total fool not to be happy about it, but there's oo way I can be complacent. I know how frivolous the business is."

The Gruntled (sic) Employee

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — "We ought to sit quietly and think about how we handle Mike," wrote Ofiver L. North to Bud McFarlane, "so that he does not start talking out of disgrantlement (if that's a word). . . .

Whether the National Security Council consultant Michael A. Ledeen was unhappy about the way his geostrategic dream had turned into an arms-for-hostages swap and was getting ready to blow the whistle is a matter for congressional hearings to explore, but the status of the locution disgruntlement is properly in this department's bailiwick.

Yes, Ollie, disgruntlement is a word. The noun used to mean "moody discontent," but is now almost exclusively used to describe the state of resentment, accompanied by sulking and pouting and leaking to the press, felt by employees, who think themselves abused or unfairly dismissed.

Like peevishness, disgruntlement is always pejorative; you may think of yourself as being in a state of resentment, anger or bitterness, but you never describe yourself as being filled with disgruntlement. That's how the boss characterizes you if you blab about the kind of incompetent martinet you think he is:

Perhaps what Colonel North was wondering about subliminally was whether gruntled is a word. At present, it is not; nobody walks around the White House basement saying, "What a nice place to work, I'm feeling perfectly grantled today." Centuries ago, it was in use, based on the little grunts of pleasure given when the lord of the manor patted his help on the head: like couth, kempt and ept, the root word became obsolete, remembered only in its opposite.

As we discovered, the computer mail unearthed by the presidential board looking into the Iranian arms affair, as well as the testimony that such mail generated, is a trove of real-life, real-time locutions.

You like your speech enlivened by a foreign phrase? The aforementioned Ledeen told investigators he received a message from an Iranian intermediary "that said, grosso modo, we have been very patient with you people." This is an Italian adverb phrase that means "roughly, approximately."

You dig the latest corporate-military lingo? Try this message from North to McFarlane regarding an approval from the secretary of state of an early approach to an Iran opening: "God willing Shultz will buy onto [sic] this tomorrow. . . ."

The transcriber, thinking the slang term was in error, put a [sic] after the outo. (Sic is Latin for "so, thus," and is used in English to tell the typographer and reader that the mistake is to be printed and noted as a mistake.) But was North wrong?

According to Robert L. Chapman's New Dictionary of American Slang, the verb phrase is buy into, defined as "to accept; acquiesce in. Thought of and perhaps coined as the opposite of sell out, which has a more comen as the opposite of sea out, which has a more contemptious suggestion of betrayal." However, I have often heard buy onto, which may be a variant of the army lingo to buy off on, meaning "to agree," on the analogy of to sign off on, meaning "to approve." I would treat North with greater respect as a native speaker and remove the [sic].

In one instance, the appendix writer was uncertain whether to sic 'em; In reprinting a letter to General

Richard Second that North signed on behalf in McFarlane, the Tower report scratched its hear. "Your discrete [sic?] assistance is again required..." Discrete means "separate, independent"; discrete means "tactful, prudent" and, in this case, "protection of secrecy." In the same message to Second, Moreover, the product of the page to Second, Moreover, and the page to Second t lane-North used the noun form of the adjective det creet: "You should ensure that only those whose discretion is guaranteed are involved." I have and doubt that discreet was meant but misspelled by

North, and the question mark inside the bracket should be removed after the sic.

How is your month fixed for some previously unremarked intelligence jargon? The report identifies George Cave, who traveled to Tehran to interpret his the American team, as "s CIA ammittant and experion Iran." Does the CIA offer annuities? In a sen yes; in governmentese, an annuitant is a retired en ployee who receives a regular pension (from the Latin : amnus, "yearly"). The word conveys a brisice and more inside connotation than "retired CIA employee" on a pension," and is often assumed to mean "spool" officially retired but still on the payroll and available."

"I guess I'm a little puzzled about the Iranian wring diagram, wrote McFarlane on the little green screen. This electrical term began to be used figuratively in the late 1960s, as The Times of London used the phrase in describe the nervous system. In military bureau cies, wiring diagram is the flippant term for "table of Little-used but colorful words have a way of being recalled by witnesses asked for their best recollection.

In testimony to the Tower Commission, the strictury of state (apparently known as "God-willing Shills" so the NSC staff) said: "I later learned that Vice Admiral." Poindexter reportedly told Ambassador Price there was no more than a smidgen of reality to the story. "Smidgen' is his word."

The admiral's word has obscure roots. The latest Oxford English Dictionary Supplement speculates that smidgen is based on smitch, an 1840 term for "a particle, bit." perhaps from the even earlier smit. In the mid 19th century, it blossomed in the Midwestern. United States with the concluding a and is now used in the most down-home manner by conjustives for Wonder Wheat Bread: "Not just a smallern of wheat but a whole passel!" (Passel is an 1835 alteration of parcel Poindexter must have known there was a whole passel of truth to that story.)

Finally, the CIA's George Cave is quoted in what the Tower Commission calls "May 1986 Hot Doos" is complaining in writing that "The people we werenegotiating with were a couple of mage down the ladder. The fact that [the Iranian official's] breath could card rhino hide was no help either.

The rhino (from the Greek for more) rhimoplasty.

can be a nose bob) is a mammal known for its manife, keratinous horns on the snort and for its thick skip.

The insult humor of breath that could cart thing hade is formulaic hyperbole, containing a comic clause analo. gous to a face that only a mother could love. It reflects, grosso mode, the annutant's discreet disgrammement. on Boarding & New York Times Service
